Both the Browne Review and Higher Education White Paper signalled the need for change in higher education admissions. Now the findings from the UCAS Admissions Process Review provides a sound evidence base to move the debate forward and consider how proposed changes will affect institutional practice.

With more scrutiny on higher education admissions than ever before, and institutions facing the need to ensure that the process is managed fairly, this is a timely moment to consider how institutional practice can be changed and improved.

The debate over the possible introduction of Post Qualification Application, and the most effective use of contextual data will also be examined.

This conference brings together leaders in admissions in higher education to provide you with the policy insight and management strategy and new techniques you need for success in an increasingly challenging discipline.

Purpose of the Conference

Specifically this conference will enable you to:

- Provide strategic insight into the implications of the White Paper on Higher Education for admissions policies and processes
- Consider what the UCAS Admissions Process Review means for the future
- Improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the admissions office in your college or university
- Provide the key policy updates in admissions policy and assess their impact on higher education admissions processes and the implication of Post Qualification Applications models
- Help HEIs to review their admissions strategies to respond to students from across the four nations and with other qualifications, including international baccalaureate
- Set out new ideas to respond to wider participation pressures and the demands for "fairness"
- Recognise the importance of the admission process as the first "student experience" which can determine whether the offer is accepted and impact the shape of the institution
- Highlight the differing experiences of HE institutions in an increasingly pressured environment, with possible new FE and private provider competition
- Discover how to widen participation with mature and non-traditional entry in an environment where over-subscription is an ongoing issue
- Share experiences and good practice through interactive seminars examining key issues
- Take advantage of significant networking opportunities with those working in the admissions field
