The Future of Part-time Higher Education

Professor Michael Thorne
Vice Chancellor
Anglia Ruskin University

No future:

- In fill
- Day release
- Monday to Friday during the day
- ‘Start again at the beginning’ courses
- ‘Not yet sure when it will run’ courses
- Amateur sales

Some of the future

- Evening and weekend face to face
- Not workday time:
  - Paper-based distance learning
  - Online distance learning
  - Workplace learning
  - Bespoke courses
  - In commercial partnerships
  - At increasingly high academic levels (DBA, EdD, D Nursing etc)

- All with Accreditation of Prior learning so you don't have to start back at beginning

Workplace Learning – Employer Engagement

- Specsavers
- Boots
- Vision Express
- Crawfords
- Basildon Hospital Consultant Surgeons
- Fire and Rescue Service
- Professional telesales (in-house and in partnership)

For business – bespoke relationships

- Accreditation is a door opener
- And sometimes it is reshaping not just accrediting
- Then add top-up to an award
- Help partners steer collaboration through their boards with a robust investment case
- Recession has not reduced demand but scope (not Foundation Degree but 30 credits etc)
